Privacy and scope

A.R.M. is identified by initials only. The appearance supplies no expanded name, street address, registration number, birth date, family address, or other personal identifier unnecessary to appellate administration. Counsel asks that the same convention be used in notices, calendar entries, and opinions. Institutional actors may be identified by their procedural roles without naming an individual officer.

Entering this appearance does not alter the petition's February 11 receipt history or the February 12 cure. It also does not concede the respondent's characterization of the agency decisions or waive any preserved challenge. Counsel remains responsible for service, docketing information, citation accuracy, and compliance with later briefing orders. Any request for relief must appear in a separately filed motion or brief and cannot be inferred merely from counsel's participation.
