Oral Argument Held Entry

Entered: June 9, 2026 Synthetic docket: SYN-CA4-26-CV-4106 Panel: Presiding Judge Vale, Judge Quill, and Judge Reed, fictional composite bench profiles

Oral argument was held on June 9, 2026. Tamsin Roe and Leo Marr appeared for Open Grid Archive, and Corin Pell appeared for the fictional United States Department of Energy. No real courtroom, remote link, address, credential, recording locator, or contact channel forms part of this entry.

The panel asked about the distinction between the operational decision-tree relationships Open Grid agrees may be protected under 7(E) and the surrounding administrative text it seeks to have reconsidered. Counsel also addressed whether DOE's 7(F) categories sufficiently connect disclosure to expected danger to an individual, and whether the seventeen passages released through RLS-OG-002 require renewed segregability review.

The Court questioned both parties about judicial-record access under Company Doe v. Public Citizen, including the separate role of public counterparts and material-specific findings. Counsel agreed that any remand could preserve information independently sustained under 7(E). The matter was submitted at the conclusion of argument. This docket entry states no holding and reveals no controlled semantic position.

Submission and Record Status

The case remains before the Vale–Quill–Reed panel for decision. The certified record and the parties’ filed briefs control. No new evidence was admitted, no responsive record or source-page count changed, and no supplemental operational explanation was added during argument.

Public discussion stayed at the level of statutory elements, official authorities, record arithmetic, and abstract field functions. When counsel addressed the controlled comparison, the panel maintained the bounded procedure authorized by the May 8 order. The exercise introduced no real system detail, vulnerability, credential, infrastructure relationship, instruction, or personal locator.

The Clerk entered this public notice on June 9, 2026, and served Tamsin Roe, Leo Marr, and Corin Pell through the synthetic docket. Interim document-specific treatment for the four controlled counterparts remains subject to later review and does not predict the merits or establish permanent access. Any disposition will be set out in a separately entered opinion and judgment.
