Notice of Appeal

Filed: February 2, 2026 Synthetic district docket: SYN-DMD-25-CV-0914 Appellant: Open Grid Archive

Notice is given that Open Grid Archive appeals to the fictional United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit from the final judgment entered January 2, 2026, and from the orders and rulings that merged into or are reviewable with that judgment.

The appeal includes the Memorandum Opinion and Order on Cross-Motions for Summary Judgment, the separate Final Judgment, and the Order on Sealing and In-Camera Review. Open Grid seeks review of the rulings sustaining operational and categorical exemption claims, accepting DOE's segregability showing, and maintaining controlled judicial materials under the district order.

This notice does not state the appellate merits and does not predict any disposition. It identifies the decisions from which appeal is taken. The public notice contains no controlled label, sealed passage, operational relationship, or real cyber information.

Tamsin Roe and Leo Marr file this notice as fictional counsel for Open Grid. The district clerk is requested to process the appeal and transmit the certified record under the applicable exercise procedures.

Parties and Judgment Appealed

Open Grid Archive was the plaintiff and is the appellant. The fictional United States Department of Energy was the defendant and is the appellee. Nila Quen is Open Grid's fictional executive director. Corin Pell appeared as fictional counsel for DOE in the district court.

The January 2 judgment disposes of all claims concerning request DOE-FOIA-2024-OG-041. It denies Open Grid's motion, grants DOE's cross-motion, sustains the challenged 7(E) and 7(F) withholdings, accepts DOE's segregation showing, and leaves the controlled counterparts under seal.

Open Grid appeals the final judgment in full. Its identification of included rulings is not a limitation on review of any interlocutory order that merged into the final decision. The appeal concerns the synthetic record and the legal conclusions entered upon it.

No damages claim, live operational record, or authentic agency system is involved. The controlled materials remain subject to the district access order unless the district court or court of appeals directs otherwise. Filing this public notice does not alter anyone's authorization.

Timeliness and Final-Decision Basis

The separate judgment was entered January 2, 2026. This notice is filed February 2, 2026. Open Grid submits that the filing is timely under the rule applicable when the United States or its agency is a party. The district docket reflects no post-judgment motion changing the time to appeal.

The judgment is final because it resolves all claims of all parties and directs closure of the district action. The continuing seal administers access to judicial records but does not leave a merits claim unresolved. Review of that access ruling is sought with the final decision.

Open Grid does not invoke an interlocutory route or request permission to appeal. It relies on ordinary final-decision jurisdiction. The notice contains enough information to identify the appellant, the court, and the judgment from which review is sought.

Any appellate filing that refers to controlled material must comply with the applicable sealed-material procedures. Public briefs and excerpts should use approved notices or public counterparts unless a separate authorization permits controlled access. This statement concerns record handling only and takes no position on appellate procedure beyond the notice.

Signature and Service

Tamsin Roe and Leo Marr sign for Open Grid Archive on February 2, 2026. Their fictional service address is recorded in the exercise docket and is not reproduced here. They request electronic notices through the synthetic filing system.

Counsel certify service on Corin Pell for DOE and delivery to Teren Wye, fictional district clerk. A copy is provided for transmission to the fictional Fourth Circuit exercise clerk with the district record.

The notice is public. It does not attach a controlled counterpart, reproduce a sealed label, or summarize the nonpublic semantic relationships considered in camera. References to exemption and access issues are drawn entirely from the public opinion and judgment.

All names, parties, offices, docket identifiers, and events are fictional. This document is not a real notice of appeal and cannot initiate a real case. It exists solely as a synthetic court record for legal training.
