Declaration of S.M.

Relationship, privacy, and personal knowledge

I use the initials S.M. and am A.R.M.'s older sibling. I have known A.R.M. throughout our lives and shared the family residence in Orin Vale during the events described here. I omit an expanded name, address, and other unnecessary personal identifiers.

I describe what I saw, heard, wrote, photographed, or received. When A.R.M. told me something outside my presence, I identify it as A.R.M.'s report rather than my observation. I am not a medical, procurement, or security expert.

Before May 2023, A.R.M. worked regular weekday hours in the municipal records annex. A.R.M. sometimes mentioned filing problems but did not tell me the details of the Harbor League invoices until after the detention. I first became concerned when A.R.M. failed to return home on May 19.

May 19 absence and calls

A.R.M. normally messaged me before working late. On May 19 there was no message. At 5:40 p.m. I called the annex. The records supervisor said two Unit Four officers had taken A.R.M. for questions that morning and had not returned A.R.M. to work.

I called the public Unit Four desk at 6:05 and 8:12. The first clerk said there was no public booking under A.R.M.'s initials. The second said employment inquiries were not placed on the public list. Neither would confirm a location or take a missing-person report.

I wrote the times, telephone menu selections, and responses in our family notebook. I also sent messages to A.R.M.'s device at 6:18, 9:03, and the next morning. The messages showed delivered only after A.R.M. returned. I did not see or speak with A.R.M. during the detention.

A.R.M.'s return on May 21

At 10:18 a.m. on May 21, A.R.M. called from a shop telephone. A.R.M.'s voice was hoarse and speech was slow. I arrived near the bus stop around 10:50. A.R.M. walked with a limp, held the left arm close to the body, and wore the same clothes as on May 19.

I saw dark marks along the ribs beneath the shirt edge, swelling at the right ankle, and redness around both wrists. A.R.M. coughed repeatedly while drinking water. I photographed only the visible injuries after asking permission. The device clock and our notebook place the photographs between 11:06 and 11:14.

A.R.M. told me Unit Four officers caused the injuries while asking about procurement copies and Nadia Pel. I did not witness that conduct. My firsthand evidence is A.R.M.'s condition, timing, clothing, speech, and movements when I arrived.

Clinic visit and recovery observations

I took A.R.M. to the North Bell neighborhood clinic at 2:20 p.m. I sat in the waiting area during the examination. I saw a clinician provide a sling and watched A.R.M. leave with written instructions and medicine.

During the next ten days, A.R.M. had difficulty lifting the left arm, climbing stairs, and sleeping. I prepared meals and carried shopping bags. I heard A.R.M. wake abruptly when hallway lights came on and saw A.R.M. avoid the front window when gray municipal vehicles passed.

The clinic extract accompanying the family packet says “reported assault,” shoulder limitation, ankle swelling, and rib tenderness. I cannot authenticate the clinician's medical conclusion, but I can authenticate the copy we received and the time we arrived. I did not see A.R.M. suffer a different injury during the relevant period.

June 7 civic-integrity complaint

I accompanied A.R.M. to the Office of Civic Integrity on June 7. A.R.M. submitted a written complaint about Unit Four detention and procurement questioning. I watched the intake officer stamp receipt OCI - 23 - 441 and write route code IC - 2 on our copy.

A.R.M. asked whether the complaint would go to Unit Four. The intake officer said serious conduct allegations were screened centrally. I wrote that response in the family notebook because the answer mattered to whether we felt safe returning home.

No investigator contacted me, even though the complaint listed me as the person who saw A.R.M. after release. A.R.M. later showed me the routing audit: on June 9 the complaint was linked to CIV - 23 - 184 through ARM - RX - 14; on June 10 its destination changed to RC - 4; and on June 30 its status remained “regional response pending.” I did not access the system myself. Nadia Pel later explained in my presence that RC-4 was the Unit Four regional command routing code.

July 11 Harbor League threat

On July 11, shortly after 7:00 p.m., I left the family residence with A.R.M. A dark utility vehicle was parked near the corner. I wrote down permit HL - 47. I recognized it because A.R.M. had shown me a copy of a North Quay Lamps invoice after release; the same permit appeared on that document.

Two people approached. One said A.R.M. had confused recordkeeping with power. The other used the phrase "North Quay Lamps," mentioned the arrival desk, and said family could answer when the clerk would not. One person touched my shoulder. I stepped back, and we entered the crowded market.

At home I wrote the time, permit, phrases, clothing, direction of travel, and weather in the family notebook. I did not identify either person. The permit match and nonpublic project nickname are facts; any conclusion about who sent them requires other evidence.

July 12 request for protection

The next morning I went with A.R.M. to a public-safety desk. I described the utility vehicle and offered the permit number. The desk officer asked for A.R.M.'s employment code, entered it into a terminal, and said a regional inquiry was already open.

The officer would not assign a new incident number. He said a contractor issue should go through procurement unless Unit Four determined it was a security matter. He did not ask me to describe the speakers separately, retain a copy of my notes, or identify the market cameras.

I asked whether an officer could accompany us to collect belongings if the vehicle returned. The desk officer declined and said to avoid the vehicle. I cannot state why he responded that way. I can state that he received our report, saw an existing flag, and directed us toward channels tied to the same regional command.

Communications after A.R.M. departed

A.R.M. left Kalyra on August 4. After departure, I remained at the family residence. Between August 9 and September 2, four messages arrived through the old family account. They asked when “the annex clerk” would return, displayed the correction-log time 16 : 42, said the regional inquiry followed the employment code, and asked whether family would collect A.R.M.'s work box.

On August 23, a gray vehicle with a Unit Four-style side stripe stopped across from the residence for about twenty minutes. I could not read a permit and did not see an occupant leave. On September 1, a person at the market asked whether A.R.M. still had family in Orin Vale.

I sent A.R.M. screenshots and notebook photographs. The authentication packet records creation times and device-transfer steps. These observations support continued interest but do not establish who authored each message or why the vehicle was present.

Communication-log authentication

The log accompanying my declaration is a transcription of entries I made from May 19 through September 2, 2023. I wrote entries on or near the stated dates. Each row identifies whether the source was a call I made, a statement I heard, a message received, a photograph taken, or something A.R.M. later told me.

I compared the transcription with the paper notebook on April 8, 2024. Counsel imaged the relevant pages and preserved the full-page margins. Corrections are shown with a single line rather than erasure. The permit HL - 47, call times, complaint receipt, and quoted threat phrases are legible in the source images.

The log is not a law-enforcement report and I did not use a synchronized forensic clock. Device times were set automatically to local time; the paper entries use approximate times where I did not look at a clock.

Execution and evidentiary limits

I reviewed this ten-page declaration with a Kalyrian interpreter on April 9, 2024. I declare its contents true to the best of my knowledge. I understand the difference between events I observed and information A.R.M. reported, and I have tried to preserve it.

Counsel will lodge this ten-page declaration as Agency Exhibit P-2 with the April 12 filing. It is separate from A.R.M.'s P-7 declaration. Lodging does not determine admission, credibility, or weight at the merits hearing.

I did not witness the May detention, do not diagnose injury, cannot identify the July speakers, and cannot establish who authored an anonymous message. My testimony supplies corroborating observations, contemporaneous notes, and the complaint/protection chronology.

I sign with initials only. Interpreter code INT-45 certifies that the declaration was read back to me in Kalyrian and that I confirmed its contents before signing.
