Never-Filed Day-15 Notice of Appeal and Timing-Predicate Packet

Never-filed date: March 12, 2026 Isolated synthetic docket: SYN-CA4-26-CR-4201-CF-DAY15-NEVER-FILED Never-filed document number: 1

Within this isolated exercise only, Mateo Serrano gives notice of an appeal from the criminal judgment entered February 25, 2026, in synthetic district docket SYN-MDNC-25-CR-0328. The branch treats the district clerk as receiving this paper directly on March 12. It was never received, filed, or entered in the actual case.

The judgment imposes 36 months of imprisonment, three years of supervised release, restitution of $186,400, a $100 assessment, and no fine. This notice identifies the appealing party and judgment without briefing any sentencing issue, waiver question, or requested appellate remedy.

Celia Arden signs for Serrano through the fictional defense office. The packet has no sealed attachment and contains no presentence material, personal identifier, court credential, or operational description of the offense. Its sole training predicate is a notice received one day after the ordinary 14-day deadline. Every following page records the assumptions that make that predicate complete.

Calendar Calculation

Judgment was entered on Wednesday, February 25, 2026. Under the ordinary calendar method, the triggering day is excluded. Day one was February 26, and day fourteen was Wednesday, March 11. No weekend or legal holiday displaced the last day.

The isolated clerk received this notice on Thursday, March 12. It was therefore received on day 15. The branch does not treat a signature, drafting event, attempted transmission, or earlier private delivery as filing. The only operative receipt is the district clerk's March 12 receipt.

The 14-day period arises from Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 4(b)(1)(A), with computation under Rule 26(a). This packet records arithmetic rather than an extension decision. Whether Rule 4(b)(4) relief is available is reserved for the limited-remand process that follows.

The actual docket and its timely filing remain outside this counterfactual source. Nothing in this packet replaces, supplements, corrects, or alters any actual district or appellate entry. The isolated docket number must accompany every branch reference so the March 12 premise cannot be confused with the real exercise record.

Direct Clerk Receipt; No Rule 4(c) Deposit

This notice is treated as delivered by counsel directly to the district clerk on March 12. It was not deposited in an institution's internal mail system on March 11 or any earlier date. No declaration, postage record, legal-mail log, or other evidence supports an earlier deposit under Rule 4(c).

The branch therefore assigns no prison-mail filing date. Serrano does not ask the court to deem the paper timely because of an institutional delivery procedure. The fictional clerk's receipt stamp and counsel's certificate both identify March 12 as the first delivery to a court filing office.

No authentic address, account, filing portal, prison identifier, tracking number, or delivery credential appears here. The direct-receipt premise is a harmless timing fact, not an instruction for using a real court system.

Because the only recognized filing act occurred on day 15, Rule 4(c) does not move the date back to March 11. Any relief must arise, if at all, from a district finding under Rule 4(b)(4), not from recharacterizing the method or date of receipt.

No Tolling or Accessibility Event

No motion listed in Rule 4(b)(3) was filed after judgment. There was no motion for judgment of acquittal, new trial, or arrest of judgment that postponed the start or expiration of the defendant's appeal period. No other postjudgment filing changed the February 25 timing trigger.

The government filed no notice of appeal, and no government filing changed Serrano's deadline. The district clerk's office was accessible throughout Wednesday, March 11, including its ordinary filing hours. No weather closure, technical order, emergency restriction, or other inaccessibility extended the last day under Rule 26.

Neither the court nor the government supplied incorrect deadline advice after judgment. The isolated record contains no order reopening time and no earlier notice misdirected to another federal court. Counsel's March 12 direct delivery is the only notice event.

These negative predicates close the ordinary routes by which the apparent day-15 receipt might instead be timely. They do not decide whether excusable neglect or good cause supports a discretionary extension. That separate question requires an express district-court finding during the prompt limited remand.

Counsel Certification and Branch Boundary

Celia Arden certifies that, within this never-filed exercise, the notice was first delivered to the synthetic district clerk on March 12, 2026. She further certifies that there was no earlier institutional-mail deposit, no tolling motion, no clerk inaccessibility, and no other filing act before that receipt.

Service is treated as made the same day on Bram Ives for the fictional United States. No genuine address, email, bar number, account, or filing credential is supplied. Tessa Wren records the packet solely for transmission to the isolated appellate docket.

The certification does not request a Rule 4(b)(4) extension and does not assert excusable neglect or good cause. Serrano may respond to any limited-remand order, but this packet supplies no affirmative excuse for the one-day delay.

This five-page paper is counterfactual from beginning to end. It was never entered in SYN-MDNC-25-CR-0328 or SYN-CA4-26-CR-4201. Its use is confined to the separately labeled day-15 training docket, and it states no outcome for the actual appeal.
