Public Docket Surrogate for Sealed Government Sentencing Memorandum

Filed: February 19, 2026 Synthetic docket: SYN-MDNC-25-CR-0328 Public docket entry: DE36

This document records the existence and category structure of the government's sealed sentencing memorandum. It is a public docket surrogate, not the filing itself and not a redacted presentence document. Bram Ives submitted the protected memorandum for the fictional United States on February 19, 2026.

The sealed companion is SEN-SV-2. Its subjects include a requested sentence, the offense's seriousness, the disputed role adjustment, deterrence, a response to defense mitigation, the advisory range, and financial terms. Each protected subject is represented publicly by a category notice rather than substantive advocacy or factual disclosure.

The paired documents use corresponding page subjects for stable exercise references but are independently written. A public viewer may confirm the filing date and topics without learning the government's detailed factual account, sentencing recommendation, or response to personal-history material. Access to this surrogate does not grant access to SEN-SV-2 or any genuine court repository.

Government-Request Category

The protected memorandum opens its advocacy with a specific sentencing request. In this public projection, the requested term and supporting details are replaced by [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–SENTENCING POSITION]. The docket therefore shows that the government made a concrete recommendation without disclosing what it was.

The request is presented under the statutory sentencing framework after calculation of the advisory Guidelines range. It is not identified as a binding plea term, and this page does not suggest that Serrano agreed with it. Restitution, assessment, supervision, and fine categories are indexed later.

Because this filing preceded the February 24 hearing, the public surrogate records advocacy rather than a judicial outcome. It does not predict a sentence or repeat a protected report recommendation. The fictional clerk maintains the category-only page as part of DE36 while the detailed exercise position remains in SEN-SV-2. No real filing address, attorney contact, or electronic credential is provided.

Seriousness-of-Offense Category

The memorandum includes a discussion of the nature and seriousness of the offense. Its public marker is [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–OFFENSE CONDUCT]. That notice identifies a sentencing subject but omits the government's narrative, claimed inferences, and descriptions of individual conduct.

The public docket elsewhere identifies Count One as a conspiracy to commit wire fraud and records the fictional victim and stipulated loss. This surrogate does not expand that information with transaction mechanics, routes, accounts, credentials, concealment techniques, or reusable instructions. It also does not state what weight the government asks the court to give the offense facts.

The category is included so an observer can see that the government addressed § 3553(a)'s seriousness factor. The sealed twin supplies the exercise advocacy to authorized readers. A matching page subject does not make the public notice a summary or permit reconstruction of protected text. The page contains no ruling and remains temporally limited to the government's February 19 position.

Participant and Person-Role Categories

The protected memorandum addresses the number of criminally responsible participants and the disputed allegation that Serrano managed or supervised another person. Publicly, those subjects are indexed as [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—OFFENSE CONDUCT] and [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—ROLE ANALYSIS].

The legal scope of the dispute may be seen: it concerns person management under § 3B1.1(b), not management of property, assets, or activities alone. The surrogate does not identify the alleged supervisee, recount any communication, or state how the government believes the court should resolve the factual inference.

The plea left role open for sentencing, and defense counsel preserved an objection. This page confirms that the government's memorandum responded to that unresolved issue. It does not say that the enhancement applies, report a judicial finding, or forecast later review. Detailed support remains solely in SEN-SV-2 under the automatic protections governing presentence-related submissions. Public access to DE36 provides procedural visibility without exposing the protected participant analysis.

Government Role-Position Category

The fifth section is the government's principal advocacy concerning the aggravating-role adjustment. It is replaced in full by [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–ROLE ANALYSIS], with any resulting calculation represented by [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–GUIDELINE CALCULATION].

This public page records only that the government took a position on whether Serrano managed or supervised at least one other criminally responsible participant. It does not disclose the requested finding, evidentiary characterization, alleged interpersonal exchange, or claimed level change. Nor does it reveal the content of a protected probation recommendation.

The category page is aligned with the corresponding sealed position so the exercise can resolve a stable citation according to access. The alignment conveys subject identity, not substantive equivalence. An unauthorized reader receives no more than a statement that the issue was briefed before sentencing. No appellate authority issued after February 19 appears, and the page contains no later disposition. The fictional public docket remains distinct from the controlled workbench projection.

Deterrence Category

The memorandum next discusses general and specific deterrence under § 3553(a). The government's reasoning and requested weight are represented publicly by [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—SENTENCING POSITION]. Any reference to offense facts remains [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—OFFENSE CONDUCT].

The docket surrogate does not identify a predicted risk, compare Serrano with another person, or repeat protected history. It states only that the government connected its recommendation to deterrence and respect for law. The detailed exercise discussion remains sealed because it draws on sentencing material not reproduced publicly.

This page also avoids operational description of the fictional offense. No mechanics, data fields, communications routes, access methods, or concealment practices are supplied. It cannot function as a guide to wrongdoing. Its role is limited to documenting that a conventional sentencing factor appeared in the government's timely memorandum. The court had not yet ruled when the filing was made, so no outcome is stated or implied.

Response-to-Mitigation Category

The government responds to defense mitigation categories without reproducing the defense's personal-history presentation. References to remorse, treatment, caregiving, employment, or other circumstances are collectively represented by [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—MITIGATION HISTORY] and [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—PERSONAL HISTORY].

This public surrogate does not disclose whether the government accepts, disputes, or assigns particular weight to any assertion. It also withholds the government's requested inference and any supporting protected material. The corresponding sealed page provides the exercise advocacy to authorized participants.

Category substitution prevents the public twin from becoming a backdoor summary of sensitive sentencing information. It nevertheless demonstrates that the government considered and answered the defense submission rather than ignoring it. The response was filed on the same day as the defense memorandum and before the hearing. No personal identifier, provider, employer, family relationship, or confidential report passage appears on this page, and no ruling follows from its existence.

Range-and-Sentence Category

The eighth section connects the government's Guidelines analysis with its ultimate sentencing recommendation. Publicly, the calculation is [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—GUIDELINE CALCULATION] and the recommended outcome is [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—SENTENCING POSITION].

This category map distinguishes calculation from discretionary selection. The sealed memorandum first states which advisory range the government believes results from resolving the role objection, then argues for a sentence after consideration of § 3553(a). The surrogate reveals neither value.

The page does not describe the recommendation as mandatory, guaranteed, or fixed by agreement. It contains no court finding and no suggestion that a later tribunal approved the government's view. Its matched position in SEN-SV-2 exists for controlled reference resolution. A public user can verify that both stages of sentencing analysis were addressed while remaining unable to reconstruct the protected arithmetic or advocacy from the surrogate alone in any reliable way.

Financial-Terms Category

The government's memorandum addresses restitution, the mandatory assessment, and the question of a fine. Those subjects appear here only as [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—SENTENCING POSITION]. The page does not state amounts, payment terms, ability-to-pay analysis, any financial identifier, or a requested collection method.

Financial information associated with presentence review is not reproduced in this public docket surrogate. The protected twin contains the fictional position needed for the court's sentencing decision. Nothing on this page changes any stipulation in the plea materials or records a final judgment.

The category also avoids account numbers, institution names, routing information, or other data that could resemble real financial information. It confirms simply that the government submitted a complete sentencing proposal including noncustodial components. Because the memorandum was filed before the hearing, the recommendation remains advocacy. Judge Venn's later decision, whatever it may be, is not part of this source.

Filing and Service Certification

Bram Ives certifies that the sealed government sentencing memorandum was submitted on February 19, 2026, through the synthetic court channel. It was made available to Judge Venn, Celia Arden, and Niko Faye for the scheduled hearing. Tessa Wren recorded the public category surrogate as DE36 and the protected companion as SEN-SV-2.

The certification contains no real contact information, account, credential, or file-system path. It confirms only the filing date, page-subject organization, recipients, and access distinction. Presentence-related content remains automatically sealed without a separately invented motion or order.

The public entry is not a redacted memorandum and cannot authorize access to the sealed exercise volume. Any workbench projection of SEN-SV-2 is disclosure-specific, temporary, and wholly fictional. This certification does not state how the district court will resolve the role objection or what sentence it will select. It preserves the government's filing posture as of February 19 and no later.
