Audit Intake, Investigation Charter, and Nonprivileged Chronology

United States District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina

Rhea Calder v. Cinder Lake Health Network, Inc.

Civil Action No. SYN-EDNC-25-CV-0882

Docket Entry 16 — Filed January 20, 2026

Cinder Lake Health Network, Inc. files this nonprivileged chronology to identify the structure and dates of its 2025 internal review without revealing communications with counsel. The document is sponsored by fictional compliance director Selene Ward and concerns Calder's reports, the engagement of fictional outside counsel Rowan Vale, and completed corporate actions.

The chronology distinguishes historical facts from any confidential request for, or provision of, legal advice. It does not state counsel's mental impressions, witness communications, or legal conclusions.

Intake of Calder's Reports

Compliance records show receipt of Calder's written exception reports on June 4 and June 18, 2025. Calder participated in an intake interview on June 27. The reports concerned apparent mismatches between selected federal-program billing summaries and supporting service documentation.

Ward recorded the subject, custodial sources, and need to preserve relevant business records. The intake record did not decide whether a billing error, false claim, or retaliation had occurred. Calder's own reports and ordinary records remain distinct from later communications created so counsel could provide legal advice.

Investigation Charter

On July 2, 2025, Cinder Lake retained Rowan Vale to direct a confidential internal investigation and advise the organization about federal-program obligations, potential exposure, reporting considerations, and remediation. The charter authorized counsel to request interviews and documents and anticipated possible litigation following Calder's accusations.

This public chronology states the purpose and scope of the engagement. It omits counsel's questions, interview content, analytical work, draft conclusions, and recommendations. The engagement's existence is not offered as a substitute for the advice itself.

Workstreams and Ordinary Sources

The review used four high-level workstreams: preservation, comparison of ordinary billing-control records, interviews conducted at counsel's direction, and evaluation of existing compliance processes. Operational staff maintained ordinary records before and apart from counsel's work.

Cinder Lake does not claim that underlying facts became privileged because employees later communicated them to counsel. It will produce responsive nonprivileged records subject to ordinary objections. It separately asserts protection for communications seeking or conveying advice and materials prepared because of anticipated litigation.

Nonprivileged Chronology Through August 2025

Preservation notices issued July 3. Collection of agreed business sources began July 7. Counsel-directed interviews occurred during July and early August. Cinder Lake received a completed investigation presentation before sending its external response on August 21.

The chronology deliberately says nothing about what a witness told counsel or what counsel concluded. It records only that the steps occurred. On August 21, Cinder Lake informed a fictional federal health-program oversight office that outside counsel had reviewed Calder's reports and that identified remedial measures were adopted.

Remediation Chronology

Cinder Lake began a secondary review of exception queues on August 12, issued revised escalation guidance on August 18, scheduled targeted staff training on August 20, and added a supervisory reconciliation step effective September 1. These are corporate actions and dates, not privileged communications.

The organization does not contend that remedial action proves or disproves Calder's retaliation claim or an underlying violation. It describes the measures because they were publicly summarized in the August 21 response. The reasons counsel may have discussed remain omitted.

Declaration and Boundary

Selene Ward declares under penalty of perjury within this fictional exercise that the dates and process descriptions are drawn from nonprivileged administrative records. She has not included an attorney communication, witness statement to counsel, mental impression, draft memorandum, or legal analysis.

Executed January 20, 2026. Submitted by Mara Voss, fictional counsel for Cinder Lake. This filing does not invoke advice of counsel, does not waive an undisclosed communication, and does not seek retroactive protection from the January 9 Rule 502(d) order.
