United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit

Piedmont Booksellers Guild v. City of Norvale

Appellate No. SYN-CA4-26-CV-4103 · Appellate Docketing Notice

Issued January 30, 2026

The clerk has opened this civil appeal on the City of Norvale's January 29 notice of appeal from the district court's January 23 order granting the Piedmont Booksellers Guild a preliminary injunction. The appeal is docketed as Piedmont Booksellers Guild v. City of Norvale, No. SYN-CA4-26-CV-4103. The originating matter is District of South Carolina Case No. SYN-DSC-26-CV-0107. The district clerk transmitted the notice of appeal and current docket sheet electronically.

The notice invokes 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1), which permits review of an interlocutory order granting an injunction. The opening of this docket is ministerial and does not decide appellate jurisdiction, the proper scope of review, or any disputed issue. The district court has not entered final judgment on the Guild's constitutional claims. The appeal concerns preliminary relief and related administration while those claims remain pending below.

The January 23 injunction has not been stayed by the filing of the notice. The district docket reflects that the City first moved for a stay in the district court on January 26 and that the motion was denied on January 28. Any request for interim relief in this Court must comply with Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 8, Local Rule 8, and the applicable motion procedures.

Initial Filing Responsibilities

Counsel shall enter appearances and file required disclosure statements promptly. A governmental party should identify its status and any entity whose financial or organizational relationship must be disclosed under the governing rules. Counsel must keep service information current and use the appellate number on subsequent submissions. This notice does not substitute for any rule governing a motion, transcript obligation, record transmission, or brief.

The court's file presently identifies the City of Norvale as appellant and the Piedmont Booksellers Guild as appellee. Any party believing the caption is incomplete or inaccurate shall notify the clerk by a dated filing that states the requested correction. The existing caption does not determine standing, liability, or entitlement to relief. No consolidated or related appeal has been identified in the materials transmitted on opening day.

The district docket states that the January 19 preliminary-injunction hearing was reported and that a written transcript was filed on January 20. The parties remain responsible for confirming whether any additional proceeding must be ordered or certified as unnecessary. Record-completion and merits-briefing dates will be established after the required materials are received; counsel should not infer such dates from this opening notice.

Because the first announced 2026 fair is scheduled for February 14, a party seeking accelerated treatment should state the concrete event date, the relief requested, and the opposing party's position. Unless this Court enters an order, existing district-court obligations remain in force. Issued by direction of the clerk on January 30, 2026, with electronic notice to counsel shown on the transmitted district docket.
