

911 Welfare-Check Call Transcript and CAD Event Record

This exhibit was lodged on the fictional docket with Officer Rusk's November 21, 2025 summary-judgment materials. It combines a certified transcript of Iris Ellison's February 3 call with the computer-aided-dispatch event maintained by the Alder Creek Police Department. The people, communications system, event number, address, and dialogue are invented for training.

Event: ACPD-2025-0203-194211-WC Location: Larkspur Court Apartments, 1844 Holloway Road, Building C breezeway Call received: 19:42:11 Dispatcher: Lena Cho Call type at creation: welfare check; mental-health or medication concern Units assigned: Officer Nolan Rusk, unit 214; Officer Priya Vega, unit 236

The transcript distinguishes words captured in the synthetic audio from CAD entries typed during or after the call. Bracketed descriptions identify pauses, overlapping speech, or administrative sounds; they do not supply missing factual content. Times use the dispatch system clock. The call record reports what Iris knew and told Cho. It does not independently establish Mara Ellison's condition, location of every object, or later movements during police contact.

The native event remained open until medical transport was recorded. A printed version was generated for civil discovery and certified by the records unit. This authored exhibit contains no real emergency communication.

Call transcript — request and identity

19:42:11 — Automated line: Alder Creek emergency communications. This call is recorded.

19:42:15 — Cho: Nine-one-one. What is the address of the emergency?

19:42:19 — Iris: It's 1844 Holloway Road, Larkspur Court, Building C. I'm calling about my sister, Mara Ellison. She lives in C-12.

19:42:28 — Cho: Are you there with her now?

19:42:30 — Iris: I'm in the parking lot. She asked me to leave the breezeway. I can see the building, but I'm giving her room.

19:42:38 — Cho: Tell me what makes you think there is an emergency.

19:42:42 — Iris: She missed some medication, and she sounds overwhelmed. She keeps saying she cannot sort out what happened today. She is upset, but she has not threatened me. I want someone calm to check whether she will talk to a crisis worker.

19:42:59 — Cho: Is Mara injured or unconscious?

19:43:02 — Iris: Not that I saw. She was sitting outside her door when I came down. She answered me. She told me not to crowd her.

19:43:13 — Cho: Has she said she wants to hurt herself or anyone else?

19:43:17 — Iris: No. She said she wanted everyone to stop pressing her. I'm worried because this is not how she usually sounds.

Call transcript — weapon and behavior questions

19:43:31 — Cho: Do you see any weapon with her?

19:43:34 — Iris: No. I did not see one. She had her phone and apartment keys earlier, and then she set them beside her. I do not know of a gun or another weapon there.

19:43:47 — Cho: Has Mara hit you, tried to hit anyone, or damaged anything tonight?

19:43:52 — Iris: No. She pulled her arm away when I touched her shoulder, so I backed up. She has not hit me. Nothing is broken.

19:44:03 — Cho: Is she trying to leave in a vehicle or walk into traffic?

19:44:07 — Iris: No. She is in the upstairs breezeway by her door. She was sitting when I came to the lot.

19:44:18 — Cho: Are there children or anyone else immediately beside her?

19:44:22 — Iris: No. A neighbor passed earlier, but the walkway is clear now.

19:44:31 — Cho: Officers will come for a welfare check. Do not surprise her or attempt to hold her. Stay where you are unless the situation changes. Can you describe her clothing?

19:44:42 — Iris: Dark green coat, gray sweater, jeans. Her hair is tied back. Please tell them she is scared when several people talk at once.

19:44:56 — Cho: I will add that. If you see a weapon, an injury, or movement toward the stairs or road, tell me immediately.

19:45:05 — Iris: I will. Please ask them to speak slowly.

Call transcript — update before unit arrival

19:45:18 — Cho: Is Mara still visible from where you are?

19:45:21 — Iris: Partly. I can see her coat through the rail. She seems to be seated in the same place.

19:45:31 — Cho: Has she said anything else?

19:45:34 — Iris: She called down that she is fine and wants to be alone. I told her I was getting help. She said, “I don’t need police.”

19:45:49 — Cho: Do not argue with her. The call is for welfare assistance, and the officers will assess what they find.

19:46:00 — Iris: All right. There are no weapons. I want that clear. She is upset, not attacking anyone.

19:46:12 — Cho: I have recorded that you report no known weapon and no assault. I cannot promise how the response will develop, but I am giving the assigned units the information you provide.

19:46:25 — Iris: Thank you.

19:46:29 — Cho: I am going to remain on the line until an officer reaches the property. If you see a material change, tell me rather than approaching.

The remaining call contains ordinary location confirmation, a vehicle description, and brief silence. At 19:52:22 Iris reports seeing a marked unit enter. Cho tells her to remain in the lot. At 19:54:09 background radio traffic reports that the subject is controlled and medical response is requested. Cho ends the call after confirming Iris can meet another officer away from the breezeway.

CAD creation, dispatch, and arrival entries

The following event lines reproduce the information fields in chronological order. They are dispatch entries, not a verbatim radio transcript.

19:42:11 — CALL RECEIVED: Sister requests welfare check for adult resident Mara Ellison at Building C, unit C-12. Caller reports missed medication or mental-health concern; subject upset and asking for space.

19:43:39 — SAFETY FIELD: Caller sees no weapon and knows of none. No assault, property damage, criminal complaint, or threat reported. Subject last seen seated in exterior breezeway. Phone and keys reported nearby.

19:44:48 — RESPONSE NOTE: Caller requests calm approach and says multiple simultaneous voices may increase distress. Caller directed to wait in parking lot and not restrain subject.

19:47:36 — UNITS DISPATCHED: Unit 214, Officer Nolan Rusk; unit 236, Officer Priya Vega. Call code WELFARE-MH. No priority upgrade. Narrative pushed to both mobile terminals.

19:48:02 — UNIT 214 ACKNOWLEDGED.

19:48:11 — UNIT 236 ACKNOWLEDGED.

19:52:14 — UNIT 214 ARRIVED.

19:52:31 — UNIT 236 ARRIVED.

19:52:44 — LOCATION NOTE: Unit 214 proceeding to Building C exterior breezeway; caller remains in lot.

The CAD does not contain a pre-contact report that Ellison possessed a weapon, committed a crime, threatened an officer, or attempted flight.

CAD event developments and closure

19:53:29 — UNIT 214 STATUS: Subject going to ground; second unit assisting. Entry created from radio button activation and short voice traffic. The field does not describe hand placement.

19:53:52 — UNIT 236 STATUS: Subject in restraints; request medical unit for contact-energy exposure and reported shoulder or wrist pain.

19:54:18 — DISPATCH ACTION: Alder Creek Fire and Medical event cross-created. Paramedic Mateo Cole assigned. No officer-emergency alarm or weapon-recovery notation entered.

19:57:46 — SUPERVISOR NOTICE: Lieutenant Marcus Hale advised of conducted-energy use. Administrative review requested under department policy.

20:01:12 — MEDICAL ARRIVED: Medical team at Building C. Units remain on scene.

20:18:40 — TRANSPORT: Medical unit transporting Ellison to Alder Creek Regional Medical Center for evaluation. Crisis contact requested. Destination is medical; no jail or booking location entered.

20:31:08 — UNIT 236 CLEAR: Vega released from scene to complete supplemental report and upload recording.

20:44:27 — UNIT 214 CLEAR: Rusk completed scene responsibilities. Welfare event disposition entered as “medical assistance / protective contact.” No arrest number or criminal charge linked.

21:03:55 — EVENT CLOSED: Dispatcher review complete. Cross-reference added to force-review event ACPD-FR-25-019.

These entries record system activity and officer-supplied status. The phrases “going to ground” and “subject in restraints” do not adjudicate whether preceding resistance was threatening.

Records certification and evidentiary limits

I, the fictional communications-records coordinator for Alder Creek, certify that this exercise reproduces the material fields assigned to event ACPD-2025-0203-194211-WC and a transcript prepared from its linked call audio. The dispatch clock was synchronized to the city time service on the event date. Entries created from radio status may reflect the time the dispatcher received or entered information rather than the first physical instant of an act.

The original training audio contains ordinary pauses, breathing, keyboard sounds, and several seconds of overlapping background radio. The transcript omits no statement reporting a weapon, assault, or crime; no such statement appears in the call. It also does not prove that no unreported object existed. Iris described what she saw and knew from the parking area.

The CAD system stores a call classification, unit acknowledgments, arrival and clearance states, short narrative updates, and cross-event references. It does not continuously track an officer's body position or the subject's hands. Consequently, a later "subject in restraints" entry cannot reconstruct the visually obstructed interval. The exact meaning of movement captured on a separate camera remains outside this custodian certification.

This record was generated for the fictional action on November 21, 2025. It authenticates only the simulated communication and dispatch record, not the truth of every speaker's perception or the constitutional reasonableness of later force.
