

SYNTHETIC TRAINING RECORD — FICTIONAL PARTIES, PEOPLE, OFFICES, IDENTIFIERS, AND EVENTS — NOT A REAL FILING OR PRESENTENCE REPORT

Discovery Production Index and Confidentiality Acknowledgment

United States District Court for the Middle District of North Carolina United States v.
Mateo Serrano Criminal Action No. SYN-MDNC-25-CR-0328 Docket Entry 13 Filed
November 10, 2025

The fictional United States, through Bram Ives, provides Celia Arden with an indexed discovery production concerning Count One. This public index identifies safe categories and synthetic control numbers only. The underlying exercise exhibits contain no real personal data, financial credentials, account routes, claim-submission instructions, or concealment methods.

The production is divided into charging records, cooperative business-record summaries, witness statements, participant communications, and Serrano interview materials. Each category is described below at a level sufficient for counsel to evaluate completeness. The index is not evidence and does not establish guilt, loss, relative role, or admissibility.

Arden acknowledges receipt for defense review. The parties agree to preserve the distinction between public source documents and nonpublic discovery. Nothing in this acknowledgment restricts Serrano's right to use discoverable material in his defense, seek a protective ruling, challenge authenticity, or request additional material required by law.

Category One — Charging and Court Records

Category One contains the synthetic complaint, indictment, arrest return, initial-appearance minutes, and detention order already available on the public docket. It also includes a clean copy of the government process log showing dates of filing and service without any private booking information.

These records establish the procedural sequence from the November 3 complaint through the November 7 release order. They do not include a presentence report, plea agreement, or sentencing recommendation. No later outcome is assumed. The government provides the category so counsel can compare the operative indictment with the earlier affidavit and identify any variance in the charging narrative.

The process log uses only the fictional docket number and names already public in this exercise. It omits addresses, birth data, fingerprints, device identifiers, and officer logistics. Arden acknowledges that the public entries need not be duplicated in every later discovery supplement; citation to the docket will be sufficient unless a version differs materially.

Category Two — Cooperative Record Summaries

Category Two contains purpose-built summaries attributed to Meridian Community Supply Cooperative. They compare reimbursement representations with neutral service-status records and identify the exact synthetic aggregate amount of $186,400. No real organization, customer, account, or payment exists.

The summaries do not reveal a submission template, validation rule, approval sequence, credential, routing field, or system response. They are designed to support the legal allegation of material false statements without explaining how to make or conceal a claim. Each summary bears a fictional custodian certification and a control number unique to this exercise.

Arden may request the underlying synthetic exhibit if needed to test a summary, subject to the same safety boundary. Receipt does not concede accuracy, materiality, reliance, or admissibility. The defense may challenge whether a record shows services were absent, whether a participant knew that fact, and whether any communication furthered the charged agreement. The government retains its burden beyond a reasonable doubt.

Category Three — Witness Statements

Category Three consists of fictional witness memoranda from cooperative custodians and people acquainted with the five alleged participants. Public copies identify witnesses by inert exercise labels rather than real contact information. Counsel receives enough context to investigate credibility and request a lawful interview.

The memoranda address whether services occurred, whether reimbursement representations were material, and what participants appeared to know. Some witnesses describe communications among Serrano, Alina Pared, Corin Bell, Darius Venn, and Nessa Holt. No witness offers a binding legal conclusion about management or supervision.

The government has identified statements that may be useful to the defense as well as those it expects to rely on. Production does not vouch for every recollection. Arden may contact a willing fictional witness through the designated exercise channel, but neither party may threaten, coach, or seek unauthorized private information. No memorandum may be placed on the public docket without review for the safety and confidentiality boundaries stated in this acknowledgment.

Category Four — Participant Communications

Category Four contains abstracted fictional communications among alleged participants during the charged period. The production preserves subject, date, speaker attribution, and evidentiary context while omitting technical headers, addresses, credentials, endpoints, claim mechanics, and any language capable of functioning as an instruction.

The government contends that the communications support knowing participation and interstate foreseeability. It also expects to argue that some exchanges between Serrano and Pared bear on relative role. The defense does not concede that characterization and may argue that the exchanges reflect coordination among equals.

No communication in this category establishes managerial authority merely because Serrano discussed a task or followed up with another participant. The legal significance remains disputed. Arden may compare the abstractions with safe synthetic originals made available for supervised exercise review. She may seek a more complete version if an omission changes meaning, provided the resulting source remains non-actionable and contains no real private data.

Category Five — Serrano Statements and Exculpatory Material

Category Five includes memoranda of voluntary fictional interviews with Serrano and any recorded adoption of a statement. The government represents that no custodial interrogation occurred without counsel or a valid waiver. The memoranda contain no real audio file, voiceprint, device identifier, or location data.

The production identifies statements supporting the government's allegation of knowing participation and statements supporting Serrano's position that he did not supervise Pared. It also identifies any material inconsistency known to the government. The defense may contest context, completeness, voluntariness, or interpretation.

The government acknowledges its continuing disclosure duties. If additional favorable or impeachment information becomes known, it will supplement promptly. This acknowledgment does not require Serrano to make another statement and does not waive the right to remain silent. Arden's receipt means only that the listed materials were made available on November 10; it is not an admission that any statement is accurate or admissible.

Confidentiality, Use, and Acknowledgment

Discovery may be used to prepare and litigate this fictional criminal case. Counsel may share it with Serrano and authorized defense personnel as reasonably necessary, while protecting witness labels and nonpublic exercise materials. Public charging documents remain public; nonpublic discovery does not become public merely because it is indexed here.

No provision restricts filing a lawful motion or presenting evidence after appropriate review. Before attaching a nonpublic exhibit, the filing party shall determine whether a public summary, protective treatment, or other court direction is appropriate. This agreement is not a presentence confidentiality order and does not govern a report that may be prepared only after a conviction or accepted plea.

Arden acknowledges receipt of the five indexed categories on November 10, 2025. Ives certifies that the index is complete for the initial production and that all records are synthetic. The parties will confer in good faith about an identified gap without treating that conference as a waiver of rights or objections.

Celia Arden Fictional Defense Counsel

Bram Ives Fictional Government Counsel