Public Docket Surrogate and Category Index for Sealed Objection Packet

Filed: February 6, 2026 Synthetic docket: SYN-MDNC-25-CR-0328 Public docket entry: DE31

This public surrogate records the existence, sequence, and category structure of a nonpublic sentencing packet. It is not a presentence report, an objection, a response, or a redacted version of any of those materials. The underlying exercise papers remain automatically sealed under the rules governing presentence material.

The packet contains three dated components: a defendant objection submitted January 23, a probation position completed January 30, and a government response filed February 6. The index preserves those procedural facts so the public docket can show what was presented to the court without disclosing protected content.

Category notices used here are descriptive placeholders. They neither summarize a person's history nor identify evidence, witnesses, communications, or investigative sources. Public access to this surrogate does not authorize access to the paired sealed volume. The exercise clerk records the sealed partner separately as PSR-SV-2 and limits it to authorized participants.

January 23 Defendant Submission

The first component is identified only as a timely defense objection to a proposed sentencing adjustment. It was submitted by Celia Arden for Mateo Serrano on January 23, 2026, within the schedule established after delivery of the draft presentence report. No confidential attachment is reproduced on this page.

The filing categories are [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—ROLE ANALYSIS], [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—OFFENSE CONDUCT], and [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—SENTENCING POSITION]. Those labels indicate subjects, not positions. They do not reveal whether a party agreed with a paragraph, requested a change, or relied on any particular fact.

The public docket may state that an objection exists and that it concerns application of a Guidelines role provision. It may not expose protected report text, personal-history material, or the substance of counsel's factual presentation. The sealed partner supplies that content only inside the fictional controlled exercise. Service was made through the synthetic court channel on the probation officer and government counsel; no real address, account, or electronic filing credential appears in either record.

Evidence-Category Inventory

This page catalogs the kinds of material referenced somewhere in the sealed packet without describing the material itself. The categories are party submissions, presentence-report analysis, stipulated offense information, sentencing calculations, and procedural correspondence concerning resolution of an objection.

The corresponding public notices are [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–OFFENSE CONDUCT], [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–ROLE ANALYSIS], [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–GUIDELINE CALCULATION], and [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–PERSONAL HISTORY]. Placement in this inventory does not mean every category supports either side. It confirms only that the court's nonpublic review set contains material assigned to those subjects.

No operational description of the charged conduct is provided. The index omits transaction details, identifiers, accounts, routes, access methods, and any information that could be repurposed as an instruction. It also omits names or circumstances from personal-history portions of the report. The sealed volume remains independently controlled. This public page provides a navigational category map for docket transparency, not a substitute through which confidential facts can be reconstructed.

Role-Adjustment Objection Category

The defendant's unresolved objection is indexed under [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—ROLE ANALYSIS]. The category concerns whether a proposed aggravating-role adjustment should be applied at sentencing. The public surrogate records the legal topic and the fact of disagreement, while withholding every confidential evidentiary assertion and every protected report passage.

The category is limited to management or supervision of another person. It does not rest on management of assets, property, or activities. That boundary is stated because it identifies the legal subject presented to the court, not because it discloses the sealed parties' competing factual accounts. The plea materials left the role question for judicial determination.

The defense component, probation component, and government component each address the same disputed adjustment through separately protected material. Nothing on this page adopts one account, predicts a ruling, or describes what sentence will follow. Anyone using the public docket can see that a live Guidelines objection existed before sentencing. Only an authorized reader of PSR-SV-2 may inspect the underlying exercise text, and even that access is a fictional workbench projection rather than access to a real court system.

January 30 Probation Position

The second component is a probation position dated January 30, 2026. Niko Faye of the Synthetic U.S. Probation Office prepared it after reviewing the timely defense objection. This surrogate discloses the date, authoring office, and affected categories, but not the officer's reasoning or recommendation.

The position is indexed under [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—ROLE ANALYSIS], [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—GUIDELINE CALCULATION], and [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—SENTENCING POSITION]. A category's appearance means that the sealed paper discusses the subject; it does not communicate whether a calculation changed, an objection was accepted, or a recommendation remained the same.

The sealed component belongs with the objection packet rather than the public docket because it responds directly to presentence-report material. No discretionary sealing motion was required or filed for this PSR-related exchange. The exercise clerk created a visible surrogate entry and linked it administratively to the protected volume. This page contains no report quotation, personal identifier, investigative method, or confidential factual narrative. It preserves only enough metadata for an observer to understand the sequence between the January 23 objection and the later government response.

February 6 Government Response

The third component is a response submitted February 6, 2026, by Bram Ives for the fictional United States. It addresses the unresolved defense objection and the probation position. The public record reports its timely filing and categorical relationship to the other components without reproducing the response.

Its subjects are [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—ROLE ANALYSIS], [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—OFFENSE CONDUCT], [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—GUIDELINE CALCULATION], and [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—SENTENCING POSITION]. These notices do not reveal the government's requested finding, its asserted support, or the wording of any protected source.

The response concerns the same person-management question identified on the docket. It does not add a new offense, alter the plea, or resolve the objection by agreement. Beyond those procedural boundaries, the response's content is available only within PSR-SV-2 to a reader possessing the required fictional exercise authorization. Public filing of this index neither waives confidentiality nor creates a redacted PSR. The clerk records service on defense counsel, probation, and the court through closed training channels that contain no genuine contact information or credentials.

Government-Response Category Map

For navigation, the government component is divided into general sections: procedural posture, governing adjustment, protected evidentiary discussion, response to the defense position, requested treatment of the calculation, and certification. The headings are indexed without disclosing their text.

The protected discussion is represented by [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—OFFENSE CONDUCT] and [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—ROLE ANALYSIS]. Any calculation discussion is represented by [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—GUIDELINE CALCULATION]. A requested sentencing position, if stated, is represented only by [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—SENTENCING POSITION].

This map does not imply that the court accepted the government's account or that the defense conceded any part of it. It also does not reveal the identities, actions, or relationships discussed in the sealed response. The purpose is to show that the government answered the objection before the final presentence report and sentencing. The public surrogate and sealed volume have equal page topology for the exercise's stable-reference system, but they are independently written documents. Corresponding page positions do not transform these category notices into summaries of confidential matter.

Unresolved-Matters Matrix

As of February 6, the public docket reflects one unresolved sentencing issue in this packet: application of an aggravating-role adjustment based on alleged management or supervision of another person. The issue remained for the district judge to decide after completion of the presentence process.

The matrix records three statuses. The January 23 defense submission is marked received; the January 30 probation position is marked completed; and the February 6 government response is marked filed. The substantive outcome column is intentionally replaced with [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–ROLE ANALYSIS]. The calculation-effect column is replaced with [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–GUIDELINE CALCULATION].

No other objection is created by this index. No matter is described as withdrawn, conceded, sustained, or overruled. The matrix merely confirms that all three scheduled components were available for later judicial consideration. It does not forecast the court's ruling, the sentence, or any appellate event. Protected personal material, including anything falling within [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY–PERSONAL HISTORY], remains outside the public surrogate. This limited status display permits chronological review while preserving the automatic confidentiality of the underlying presentence exchange.

Confidential Service Record

The fictional service ledger shows distribution of the sealed components to the court, defense counsel, government counsel, and the probation officer through a closed training channel. Tessa Wren, the synthetic district clerk, recorded the public surrogate separately as DE31. The ledger contains no real email address, delivery token, account name, or system path.

Public viewers may confirm that service occurred on the dates associated with the three components. They may not inspect delivery receipts or obtain the sealed documents through this index. The paired volume PSR-SV-2 is a controlled exercise artifact, and its availability depends on a separate, disclosure-specific workbench authorization.

The service category does not establish that any recipient agreed with another participant's position. Nor does it change the automatic sealed status of objections and responses concerning presentence material. [NONPUBLIC PSR CATEGORY—PERSONAL HISTORY] and every other listed notice continue to stand for omitted categories only. The exercise intentionally separates docket visibility from content access so that a participant can reason about filing sequence and record completeness without being given confidential facts through the public side.

Clerk's Certification

I, Tessa Wren, fictional district clerk, certify that this surrogate accurately records the existence and chronology of the January 23 defense objection, January 30 probation position, and February 6 government response in synthetic docket SYN-MDNC-25-CR-0328. The public entry is DE31; the protected companion is PSR-SV-2.

The certification is limited to titles, dates, category labels, filing status, and service status. It does not authenticate or disclose the substantive contents of a presentence report, objection, position, or response. The category notices on these pages are placeholders designed to prevent protected facts from appearing in the public record.

No real court, probation office, filing system, or person is involved. This index cannot be used to obtain sealed material, and it should never be described as a public or redacted presentence report. The fictional workbench maintains the public surrogate and sealed twin as distinct access projections with corresponding page positions. I certify the surrogate on February 6, 2026, without stating how the district judge will resolve the adjustment or what sentence may later be imposed.
