

Individuals likely to have discoverable information

Leora Benton: her work, January 17 opposition, EEOC participation, notice of termination, RIF communications, and mitigation.

Naomi Voss: assignment practices, performance reviews, project continuity, and conversations with Solis and Pike.

Draven Pike: receipt of the EEOC packet, RIF criteria, calibration edits, exceptions, and final approval.

Mira Solis: employee-relations intake, EEOC routing, workbook custody, disclosures, and termination documentation.

Tessa Wynn and Omar Ibarra: their duties, source metrics, calibration scores, approved exceptions, and work assigned to them after the reduction in force.

Documents in Benton's possession

Benton identifies her January 17 email and replies; EEOC charge copies; personal calendar; assignment summaries; performance reviews; copies of audit completion reports; termination letter; benefit statements; and post-termination job-search records.

Benton does not possess Blue Cedar's native RIF workbook, access logs, internal routing log, or complete comparator files. She will request them.

Her personal assignment summary was compiled contemporaneously from project calendars. Benton will produce the underlying calendar exports so Blue Cedar can test the summary.

Benton identifies no audio recording. She will redact personal identifiers and preserve client codes while producing the calendars and summaries in the form maintained.

Computation of damages categories

Benton identifies back pay from March 24, 2025 through judgment, less interim earnings; lost employer retirement contributions; lost health-benefit value; and other compensation shown in payroll records.

She seeks compensatory damages for emotional distress to the extent supported by admissible testimony and lawful limits. She does not identify medical records in this initial disclosure.

Equitable relief may include reinstatement to a comparable audit-management role or front pay if reinstatement is impracticable. The feasibility dispute depends on whether equivalent work and positions continued after the RIF.

The disclosure provides categories, not a final amount. Benton will supplement calculations as payroll, mitigation, and post-RIF organization records are produced.

Insurance and indemnity information

Benton has no insurance agreement that may satisfy a judgment. She requests Blue Cedar disclose any employment-practices policy or indemnity agreement within Rule 26(a)(1)'s scope.

For the liability record, Benton identifies no insurer as a decision participant. The existence or absence of coverage does not bear on protected activity, knowledge, comparator treatment, or causation.

The parties agree that insurance material need not be included in a merits appendix unless it becomes relevant to a litigated issue. That agreement does not limit Rule 26(a)(1)(A)(iv) disclosure or a party's right to seek the policy through discovery.

Disclosure limitations and supplementation

These disclosures describe information reasonably available to Benton on August 15, 2025. They do not adopt Blue Cedar's characterization of any witness or document.

Benton will supplement if she learns that a listed witness has materially different discoverable information. Listing a person's name does not disclose every subject the person might later address or excuse timely supplementation of materially incomplete information.

Wynn is disclosed for her duties, source metrics, calibration score, continuity exception, and retained work. No additional subject of discoverable information is identified for Wynn in this disclosure. Benton will supplement if she later learns of a materially different subject.

Certification and service record

Counsel certifies that the disclosures follow a reasonable inquiry into information then available and are complete for the subjects stated. The certification does not warrant that every allegation will be credited.

The service record states the disclosures were exchanged electronically on August 15, 2025 with Blue Cedar's counsel of record. The exchange time and recipients are preserved in the case file.

Attachments identified for production will receive control numbers when exchanged. This document does not duplicate their substantive pages, and each produced item retains its source and relationship to the district docket.
